PROJECT SYNOPSIS

A newly promoted FBI agent, Catherine Bennett, finds herself wanted for the murder of her fiancé. She is arrested and interrogated by her own team. However, she is clear of the charges when witnesses place her at a rest stop in Washington, DC. Now she's on a mission to find out just who really caused the death of her fiancé.

Shortly after returning to active duty with the bureau, the case of the dead Tang family hits. The only surviving member is a nonverbal empath boy named Max. He communicates through drawing. One drawing sets off a series of events that locks in Max's mind answers to serial killings. Unfortunately, no foster home would take him because of his gift, and he lands in a state run psychiatric institution.

Their two worlds are about to collide when Catherine Bennett finds Maxwell Tang in the psychiatric ward. After speaking with his doctor, she realizes the boy holds the key to dozens of Serial killings. He might just have the answer to who killed her fiancé.

CHARACTERS

MAX, 10, mixed race, is a high-functioning non-verbal child with a unique empathic ability. Max takes on the person he connects to and will recreate their darkest memories through his drawings. Max will maintain this empathic behavior toward any individual he's encountered until he is touched by another or able to draw pictures of what he has seen.

CATHERINE BENNETT, 30, is a beautiful FBI Agent who is all business. Once the subject of a murder investigation in the death of her fiancé, she was acquitted of all charges. Now she unknowingly is investigating a series of serial killings that will lead her back to the death of her fiancé, where it all began. Catherine's drive to solve the crimes takes over her life, leading her down a path that will put others in danger, including a young boy empath named Max Tang.
